A CLERGYMAN'S WORK.

The Many Demands Made Upon the Time of Faithful Pastors.

of Faithful Pastors.

The sunbeams streamed in from a bay window through the curtains and foliage plants, and flooded the room with a mellow light, says the New York Graphie. The birds sang in their gilded cages, while their less melodious, though freer friends without, added their pretty chirps to the chorus. A stray sunbeam rested caressingly on the head of a man seated at a desk, the green baize top of which peeped out from beneath a mass of papers and correspondence. Around him lay scattered books, papers, magazines and pamphlets of all descriptions.

The central figure was a prominent clergyman of New York. His pleasant face was seamed with the lines of thought, while his pen, scratching rapidly over the paper, was laying the frame-work of a brainy, vigorous sermon. Looking up and observing a visitor, whom he had been too busy to notice before, he courteously motioned him to a seat and proceeded to the completion of his task.

tioned him to a seat and proceeded to the completion of his task.

"You catch me in a busy time," he said, pleasantly, as the pen ceased moving and he threw himself back in the chair with an air of relief. "The general public seems to be under the impression that we ministers have nothing to do but to laugh and grow stout, preach a sermon or two and enjoy the good things of this world," said the clergyman. "This idea, strange to say, is shared by some members of our own conshared by some members of our own conregations, who, if they took the interest in he church they should, would soon learn to

"This, I am sorry to say, expresses the idea for your day the presses of a clergy many."

idea formed by the masses of a clergyman's life. Idle? No, indeed, we are not. I have been in both the business and Christian world for over twenty-five years, and I never worked so hard in my life as I have since I became a minister.

"The world of laborers and mechanics are crying out for less hours, yet we work from fourteen to nineteen hours a day, Sun-days included. To be sure, there is a certain advantage in our business—for such I must term it—in the fact of its not being monotonous. We generally try to spend our mornings in our studies, but we are subject to so meny intermetally the I do subject to so many interruptions that I do my best thinking and almost all my writing after nine p. m., and have for nearly twenty after nine p. m., and have for nearly twenty years. We are public men, the servants of the people, and should be at their disposal at any hour of the day or night. I have always made myself easy of access, and hold myself in readiness to extend sympathy or do good where good can be done. We are subject to sudden calls for funerals, baptisms, weddings and sick calls, and are expected to lend an ear to the wail of sorrow from whomever it may come from whomever it may come.

"As a minister you are justly expected to give consolation. To do this you must give the matter your undivided attention. Then comes the preparation of our sermons. This necessarily takes time, and a great deal of it. It takes thought and study to enable a clergyman to present to his con-gregation Sunday after Sunday and year after year thoughts that will reach their hearts, and preach sermons which will not pall upon them, and do more harm than good by turning them from the church with a feeling akin to disgust at the minister's poverty of expression or meagerness of

"What time I can get from my sick calls and other drains upon my time I devote to study, but I have not an idle moment, and have no opportunity for social calls whatever. My method of making a sermon is this: In the first place I settle on a theme early in the week, read about it, investigate it and think about it until the inspiration. it and think about it until the inspiration to write it at one sitting. It is done by simply letting my thoughts accumulate. Every thing a man reads, sees and thinks about in his life and travels is held by the cumulative power which stores up ideas. These are occasions when a sermon come like a flash and is seen from beginning to end by pure inspiration, and some of the best sermons I ever preached have come in that way, suggested by something I had seen or somebody had said."

"Are these studies all retrospective, dealing entirely with the traditions of the past?" ing entirely with the traditions of the past?"

"They should not be, but I regret to say that in some cases they are, and this accounts for the failure some men make as ministers of the Gospel. They seem to forget that the world is progressing, that every year the people to whom they preach are becoming better informed on all subjects; that the minds of the young, like snonges are absorbing all the knowledge. jects; that the minds of the young, like sponges, are absorbing all the knowledge they can, and that each generation is becoming better informed than the last. These points are vital to the success of a clergyman. He must not only keep abreast of the times, but if possible in advance of them, as a school-teacher must ahead of his class. Once let your congregation pass you in this education, so that they look down upon you from the height of this superior knowledge, and your usefulness is deupon you from the height of this superior knowledge, and your usefulness is destroyed. The narrowness of your views is at once detected by their better trained intellects, and the truths you may tell them lose their value. A congregation look to their minister for guidance and for help, and it is folly for the blind to lead those who can see or the weak to assist the who can see, or the weak to assist the strong.

"We can not preach a sermon that fur-"We can not preach a sermon that furnishes food for reflection without first reflecting, nor can we hope to elevate the thoughts of those to whom we preach when we ourselves stand on a lower intellectual plane. Infidelity is narrow, while faith is broad. Knowledge begets liberality. By liberality I do not mean liberality in its abused sense. I mean that the more extensive a man's knowledge of the world becomes the broader his comprehension of its spiritual needs.

"This is the life and these are the duties of a clergyman, and you can readily see of a clergyman, and you can readily see that I am not amiss in my statement that the clergymen of this city can be classed among its busiest men."

The southing effects of hot water are not fully appreciated," said a physician the other day. "I recommend it to many of my patients who suffer from insomnia, produced by nervous irritation of the stomach, and also for certain forms of indigestion. Many of them object to it at first, but soon come to like it and are generally much benefited by it. A glass of hot water now and then will work no appreciable good, of course, but a steady habit of hot-water drinking once formed, and sustained regularly for a few months, works wonders with certain constitutions. I generally recommend its use just before going to bed. It is a great soother."

BIRCH BARK CANOES.

A Description of the Simple Methods Employed in Their Construction.

Birch and canvas canoes are greatly increasing in popularity, says the New York Mail and Express. At most of the summer resorts they supersede all other craft that have to be propelled by hand. There are several reasons for this renewal of favor. They are not hard to propell. They are pretty and inexperienced hands perfectly safe. They are also indispensable to sportsmen. So general is the favor in which these light and graceful boats are held that the building of them has become quite an industry in Maine, especially along the oot river.

If properly handled a good canoe will safely hold four men. Canoes intended for deep water should have considerable depth. Those intended for shoal water, such as trout fishers use, are made as flat as possible. Up to the time when canoeing was in-troduced the insterials for building craft of this kind could be found all along the Pencb scot river. Big birch trees grew in count-less numbers and clear, straight cedar was less numers and clear, straight cedar was quite as plentiful within a few feet of the water's edge. Now one must go miles back into the densa forests for such materials, and even then selfon does it happen that two suitable trees are found within sight one of the other. Cedar is the harder of the two birch that all bark for canoes comes. The difference in color depends upon the time of the year that the tree is denuded. The inner side of the bark has a reddish brown noter side of the bark has a reddish brown color in winter and a smooth golden color in summer. The winter-peeled bark is preferable for canoe-building, because it is tougher and can be more easily ornament. tougher and can be more easily ornamented. In selecting a tree the canoe builder looks for one about a foot in diameter. In felling it he cuts it so as to have it fall across two logs in order that it may not touch the ground. With a large knife having a curved blade he whips off the outer bark and "toasts" it near a fire, after which it is rolled and ready for transporta-these simple little boats his white brother is much more at home in the work. But while the red man can not build so neatly and so cleverly as the white man, he can outdo him in navigating the craft over and over again. The only tools required in building a canoe are a knife and awl, a draw shave and a hammer. Sometimes an Indian will do all of his work with a knife. When ready to put his boat together the builder drives several stakes in the ground and thus frames the craft. The bark is re-toasted and fitted to the frame, the gunwales, strips of clear stripped cedar are placed and the top edges of the bark are secured to them by means of copper nails. Thin-shaved cedar is used to line the craft, after which a number of cedar timbers are "sprung" into place. Cane thread is used to sew the cuts in the bark and while shaping it, after which it is gummed over with a resin and oil paste. Narrow ash thwarts and strips of canvas are glued over the ends of the canoe where the bark sheets meet, and the boat is done. Poplar and ash supply the paddles, and all that re-mains to be done is to launch the craft and years ago canvas began to be used extensively in canoe-building, instead of birch bark, but it will never entirely suthat bends so gracefully. There are several canvas canoe factories in Maine, but the canoes made of canvas have neither the symmetry nor the durability of the birches. They are a trifle cheaper, however, but if pleasure and profit are wanted one should never have any thing but a bark craft.

HANDY ANTIDOTES.

Remedies Recommended by a Hospital Surgeon in Cases of Poisoning. Some time ago a young woman on First street quarreled with her husband, and in rough on rats," relates the New York Mail and Express. She had taken poison be-fore, but of a different kind and only enough to make her sensibly ill. At first she denied to her better half that she had taken poison, but as the pain become more and more intense she grew alarmed, and finally acknowledged what she had done. The husband then started for a doctor. On the way he met a policeman and told him of the matter and asked him also to go for a doc-tor. Instead, the officer pulled the alarm-box and summoned an ambulance, and had the poor woman taken to a hospital. All the way from the house to the hospital she called on the doctors to save her. She wanted to live "for her baby's sake." Soon, however, after being admitted to the hospital she died.

"Had the police officer who called the ambulance for this poor woman," said the hospital surgeon as he signed the death certificate, "known a little more about what to do in cases of emergency and a little less of the civil service catechism, her life might have been saved. Indeed, many cases that come to us might be saved if the person first in formed only knew a few commonplace things. Take cases of poisoning for instance. As a rule there is in every household and factory, or at least within easy reach, simple and effective antidotes. These remedies are of infinite value. Warm water and mustard can always be got as water and mustard can always be got, as can also sweet oil, butter or lard. For poisoning by bug-poisons, blue vitriol, mercury, lead water, saltpetre, sulphate of zinc or like substances, milk or white of eggs in large quantities is always to be commended.

"For poisons like rough on rats, Paris green and Fowler's solution of arsenic, one should tickle the faces of the victim with a feather, or induce vomiting by copious draughts of salt and water, which should be followed by good-sized doses of sweet oil or milk.

"Where oil vitrol, muriatic or oxalic acid is the poison, one can easily help matters by scraping some plaster from the wall and dissolving it in water and make the patient drink ft. Soap dissolved in water is also good in these cases. When caustic poisons are taken, then water and vinegar, or lemon juice and water should be given. "Many suicides seek the desired end by means of carbolic soid. In such cases give the person drinks of a glutinous character. Flour and water, for instance, is especially can great tavor with suicides. Induce vomiting and give all the strong coffee you can get down them. And so I might go on. All these things I have named, you will see, are nearly always at hand and can be employed with good results, if only until the doctor comes. They are things the police doctor comes. They are things the pought to know at any rate." WE have had occasion very often to speak of the inadequate appropriations of the late administration, while at the same time they were never tired of prating of the surplus in the treasury. We all know the difficulties attending the running of the courts because of the want of money to pay even witnesses and jurors. The same has been true so far as the surveys of public land were concerned. The navy, the Postoffice Department-in fact, every branch of the public service-has been fettered and rendered in many cases useless because of this parsimony. A millionaire who deprives his family of the necessaries of life and grinds his working people into the dust by refusing them decent wages is called a miser and is justly despised by decent people. An enormously rich government whose treasury vaults are bursting with accumulated wealth that is niggardly in its appropriations for its offices and officials is just as mean and despisable as a millionaire miser.

WHILE our farmers are casting their eyes about to better their condition, let them consider the possibilities in starting a condensed milk and dairy manufactory on the meadows. There is no valley on the Pacific coast so well adapted for dairy products as the Truckee Meadows. An abundance of good, clear, cool water, fine pasture lands, and plenty of alfalfa hay, make it a paradise for the dairyman. The trade in condensed milk is enormous, and there is not a factory anywhere on the coast. One could be started here in connection with a butter and cheese factory, where the farmer could take his milk and find a ready sale at good prices, and the proceeds would be very large. We are but yet in our infancy in agricultural pursuits, and when farming is reduced to a science, as it is at the East, the field it opens up will be far beyond the present system followed in this country. The GAZETTE believes the condensed milk proposition a good one, and worthy to be investigated by our husbandmen.

and along the avenues and in the britests there was beginning an adorn-brite dever made by Governor Stevensen. In the first place, Judge Wells is not entitled to a seat on the bench for any party services, and in the second place, his appointment is so glaringly unconstitutional that the State Conntrol of East 20th street and with gay and fluttering flags steamed down troller cannot, if he does justice to the constitution, issue a warrant for his salary. The reasons the Governer had for hurrying Wells out of his own office and into a judicial, before other lawyers in the State were allowed to apply for the honor, needs no comment here. The idea of a libel suit for the statements made in the Gazertz is too ridiculous to be entertained for a moment.

For several it was after 12 o'clock when she came in sight on the upper bay. For several minutes the roar of cannons as she passed the several men-of-war was almost deafening, each of these, to-gether with the forts in the harbor, firing a national salute. The bay was crowded with small boats and vessels of every description, so that from a distance a glimpse of clear was practi-cally impossible. As the little war-ship emerged from Kill Von Kill the yacht cannon began to boom in quick succession, the national salute being fired. Soon there was a perfect roar of canhons and clouds of smoke hung of cannons and clouds of smoke hung ever the bay like a bank of sea fog, and belches of fire flashed through the smoke like streaks of lightning, giving the scene a lurid glare. The scene was a striking one. Faintly above the roar of the cannon could be heard the shrill pi e of boatswain, whistles on the revenue cutters, yachts and menof-war. In a trice the sturdy tars manned the vards and crosstrees, and slumber. The first stop of importance was at West Philadelphia, just as the first streak of day was visible. Here Postmaster-General Wanamaker and his Secretary came aboard. At Tacony a crowd of a hundred people were gathered, and, as the train passed, an Executive salute of thirteen guns was begun. About this time the clouds, which had been threatening rain, began to break away, and in the opalescent tints of the sky gleamed a promise of a fair day.

As soon as she had got well into the As soon as she had got well into the river, the signal gun was fired fi om the Chicago, and anchors were raised with alacrity. Then began the real naval parade—a sight that will long be remembered by the thousands of people who lined the docks and housetops along the river front. Almost every steamer of any size had a band of mu-sic aboard, and the number and va-riety of airs that floated ashore on the hazy air were something remarkable. The Chicago steamed on until opposite 34th street, when another gun was fired. This was a signal for the yachts and cutters to disperse, and like a huge flock of swans they gracefully wheeled around and sped down the bay to their various and sped from the pay to their various and sped flow the pay to their various and sped flow the pay to their various and sped flow the pay to their various and the same than t anchorages. Then the naval vessels came to anchor off Fifty-first street. In the meanwhile the merchant divis-ion was doing the grand on East river, both divisions combining into one, and led by the Bergen, they steamed up the river, a literal mass of bunting and and flags. The flagship turned a stake boat just below the rocks at Hunter's Point, and then came down the west side of the river ground the Battery.

Grain Ranches. The happiest and most prospero man and family, says an exchange, is he who has his all in a fifteen or twenty acre tract of land, on which he raises his own garden, his few hogs, his two or three cows, his chickens, his every variety of fruit and berry, nuts, and in fact everything he wants. We know of but few so situated as yet, out the tide is drifting that way, and the sooner our people give up the idea that a man must own nearly a town-ship to make a living cultivating the mother earth, the sooner our people will become versed in the true philoswill become versed in the true philosophy of what constitutes the simonpure life of comfort and happiness.
We assert, without fear of successful contradiction, that twenty acres of good land if manipulated after the manner of the New England husbandman, is enough for any man and family to make a good living upon. Let him have his five or ten acres planted to choice varieties of fruit, berries and vines; his five acres to alfalfa, which will raise and fatten ten or fifteen head of cattle a year; his chicken yard and garden spot, and he will not only make a comfortable living for a good-sized family, but he will lay up money every year. Diversified crops are the kind that count in the long run.

He spoke with a kindly candor of the dead, bore testimony to his excellent qualities and to his sincere shame and sorrow as he approached his end at the character of the profession he followed. He said with great emphasis that he never counseled any young man to under-take the wretched business, and had tried hard to turn some back from it. "I commit," said the preacher in clos-"his body to the grave and his spirit to the righteous retributions, the tender mercies and the paternal love of God, and can ask nothing better for any of you than on the deathbed to be for all evil done in your life as sincerely penitent as he was.

of Being the Pine Nut Mur-

The Genoa Courier of the 26th inst. says: Last Sunday. F. Donnelly and J. B. Murphy arrested Wm. Sadler and John Frebish Bier in Pine Nut on suspicion that they were implicated in the murder of Balma Celas. They were brought to Genoa and placed in jail. Sadler is the man who came to town on the 27th of March and re-ported to the athorities the discovery of the dead body of the murdered man, and Bier is a Dutchman who has been cutting wood in Pine Nut. Their examination before Justice Burnham has occupied the past two or three days, and nearly the entire population of Pine Nut was summoned as witnesses. All of yesterday was spent in taking testimony, and the case of Bier was taken under advisement until to-day, while Sadler's case was continued for further examination of witnesses.

Taking all the Water.

The Silver State says: Ranchers on the upper Humboldt are appropriating all the water in the stream. William Dunphy and Grayson & Hinckley are said to use every inch of water they can get out of the river, and are finding fault because there is not more to appropriate. Does the recent decision of the Supreme Court, which sustains the doctrine of appropriation, give land owners near the head of a stream the right to deprive those living below them of the use of any part of the natural flow of the stream? If it does, persons living on the Humboldt west of Beowawe might as well make arrangements to get Hinckley are said to use every inch of on account of pauperism. as well make arrangements to get along without water from the river, save in exceptional years, when the stream overflows its banks.

AN OREGON AMAZON.

AN OREGON AMAZON.

A Frontier Beauty on the Back of a Spirited Broncho.

The last jar of heavy feet was heard, writes an Oregon correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle. Some young horses came down a steep hill at full run. Behind was a reckless, rapid rider. The loose stock dashed past. The horse that bore the rider was tossing his head madly and slinging white foam in flakes from his mouth. He was a rearing, restless, heavy-built regulation broncho, but it was remarked that he was well under control, for he seemed to be fairly lifted from side to side by the reins at the will of the rider, who drew up to our resting place. We stared in a way that was not mannerly, even in the wilds of Oregon. The rider of the restless pony was a young girl. She waited with en barrassment for us to tell our errand.

"Who lives here?" we asked.

"Who lives here?" we asked.
"I do," she replied, in a tone that did not make us feel any more at home.
"Whose garden is this?" is the next

After a pause, she added: "Can I do any thing for you, gentlemen?"
"Well, well, no," was about the only in-

"Well, well, no," was about the only intelligible answer at command.

"Will you come to the house?" she added; "it is near dinner time."

As she rode before we looked upon a graceful rider, well rounded, neat figure, a brunette, with the languid beauty so much admired in the Castilian women, clad in coarse, strong, short skirts, below which showed a small boot and a keen, bright spur. Her rich saddle was new, strong and double rigged. Her horse had not stopped at the gate till she sprang to the ground. My companion stepped forward with a Chesterfield bow, but too late to assist her. She asked us to go to the house while she She asked us to go to the house while she led her horse to the stable. When we were within a rod of the door we both started with surprise. A repulsive, sullen, scowling Indian was at each window. We were greatly surprised to learn that our bostess was a half breed. In her features or actions we had not observed one trace of the Indian. Her demeanor was modest, while at the same time she was tully imbued with that Western liberality that allows no man to pass without an invitation to partake of a meal or night's lodging. We bade her good-bye reluctantly, and continued our hunt, thinking how much more appropriate such grace and such wealth would be in the circles of society than on the back of a

WORDS OF ADVICE.

An Article Devoted Exclusively to Young Ladies Who Are Engaged.

Don't give yourself airs because you are engaged, while your older sister isn't, advises the Toronto Globe. Old maids are fashionable at present, particularly when they have ideas of their own, with careers to match. After you have patiently folded to match. After you have patiently folded your brown wings within the portal of home, while she is "careering" without, it will not be so certain that all the advantages are on your side. To succeed as a wife you ceed in a man's work you must be as selfish as a man. This implies no reproach to the despised sex. It is amusing to hear women ounce the selfishness of men, when that denounce the selfishness of men, when that selfishness, cultivated, of course, in moderation, is a wise provision of nature, directly designed for the benefit of wives and families. Whatever you do, don't marry a conspicuously unselfish man. He will be frank and gay, open-hearted and open-handed, a delightful companion popular with every

If there is any reform that you wish to inaugurate, any changes that you desire to effect in the character or habits of the man of your choice, now is the time for prompt and decisive action.

You will expect me to say something about the necessity of being able to make a shirt and bake a loaf of bread, but I am just as tired of the shirt and bread style of just as tired of the shirt and bread style of talk as you are. One thing, however, I will say. Any girl of fair average intelligence who will give her mind to the subject can master the science of cooking, root and branch, in a period of time not exceeding three months. It is nonsense to think that only a life-long acquaintance with the broom and Irving-pan can make one adept in their use.

This is all, except that where other pe ple look at you with knowing eyes, or with a sickly smile, or with an expression of bot-tomless idiocy, you needn't appear to take

INGROWING NAILS.

A Simple Treatment for This Exeruciatingly Painful Affection.

A very common and troublesome affection is that which is popularly termed "the ingrowth of the nails," and which most usually occurs by the side of the great toe, says the Boston Journal of Health. There is really no alternation in the nail, as its name would imply; the surrounding soft parts are first swelled and inflamed by constant pressure against the edge of the nail from the use of tight shoes. If this state is permitted to continue, an ulcer is formed in pressure against the edge of the nail from the use of tight shoes. If this state is permitted to continue, an ulcer is formed in which the edge of the nail is impedded. Pain is the consequence, sufficiently severe in some instances to prevent walking. Treatment for this condition often demands the skill of a physician. The sufferer might attempt a cure by the simpler methods, and, if they fall, professional assistance should be sought. The first object is to remove the cause, then to lessen the irritation and reduce the swelling. After soaking in hot water the nail should be thinned by scraping, and if very painful, a flaxeed poultice will bring relief. After the irritation has sufficently subsided, soft cotton should be pressed between the flesh and the nail, and after that is done it should be asturated with the tinsture of lodine, and the application repeated several days, after which the tenderness will disappear. It may be necessary to lift the end of the nail, and this can be done by pressing cotton between it and the toe. This treatment is usually effective, and is attended with as little pain as any which can be suggested.

A PASTOR'S ADVENTURES.

Embarrassing Position Occupied by an Expounder of the Scriptures.

In relating some of the embarrassing positions he once occupied, a preacher writes in the Chicago News: "It was summertime, and the church doors were open. I was standing at the lectern reading the lessons, when my eye caught through the doorway the figure of Carlo, a large, black spaniel, with which I was on friendly terms. The recognition was mutual. My acquaintance trotted up the sisle, and brought himself to anchor a few feet in front of where I was standing. He watched me with close attention, evidently wondering at my unfamiliar garb and estranged manner, but in doubt whether to manifest recognition by jumping up alongside of me or by indulging rassing Position Occupied by in doubt whether to manifest recognition by jumping up alongside of me or by indulging in friendly barks at a distance, Finally, the creature made a bolt up the gallery stairs, and was lost to view amid the lonely

"But the incident was not at an end. I had dismissed from my mind the imprudence of my canine friend, and the service had or my canne friend, and the service had proceeded peacefully as far as sermontime. Scarcely had I begun my discourse, when it became evident that some stronger attraction was engaging the attention of my audience. Lifting my eyes from the manuscript, I beheld the head of the dreadful dog looking wistfully over the gallery with dog looking wistfully over the gallery with-in a few yards; and from the expression of his countenance, it was too evident that he his countenance, it was too evident that he was calculating the nearest point from which be could reach the pulpit. No sooner did he perceive my recognition of him than he leaped upon the seat and planted his fore-legs on the front edge of the gallery. He was triumphantly waving his tail, apparently balancing himself for a spring, when the heads of the sexton and clerk bebed up beyond the sexton and clerk below menacings and subdued adjectives were heard; the dog hesitated; turning his head, took in the situation, and fied. Finally, to my intense relief, but apparently to the great regret of the juvenile element in the congregation, the 'ssistant beadle,' effecting a flank movement, seized Carol by the tail and dragged him down the gallery stairs, to be ignominously driven forth among the dogs of the street.

"One wintry Sunday evening I was offi-ciating, for the first time, at a mission church in the outlaying part of the parish. The building had been a disused chapel. The pulpit, a formidable but rickty struct-The pulpit, a formidable but rickty structure, was approached by a high and shaky flight of steps, and was illuminated by two tallow capdles in tin sconces, on either side of the preacher. I had observed some slight unsteadiness on the part of the friendly dips, and accordingly had at first moved about as little as possible. However, as the sermon went on, caution was forgotten, and, warming with my subject, 1 began to indulge in a little oratorical action. Reaching dulge in a little oratorical action. Reaching a climax in my discourse, I lifted both my arms and brought them suddenly down upon the deal hard-board with a sharp blow. The result was, that the dips bounced neatly out of the sconces, performed swift somersaults and disappeared down below, among some females, if one might judge by the noises that ensued. By the unfeigned laugh with which my exploit was received, I pre-sume there must have been something ridiculous in the sudden ejection and fall of the candles. However, I failed to see any humor in the situation, for I was left in the dark and being accustomed to the written sermon, was for the moment nonplussed. I durst not look over the pulpit or ask for the can-dles, and my rustic audience were so lost in the fun of the incident as to forget how necessary light is to a man's teaching. I made a brief effort at extempore preaching, and then an early and ignominious exit.

"It was in a poor outlying hamlet, and the congregation had been gathered from a wide area. Many had journeyed in donkey-carts and gigs, and during service-time the animals were wont to be tethered on the adjacent village common. On a sudden the drowsy stream of the preacher's sermon was interrupted by a racket outside the was interrupted by a racket outside the building. Presently a young donkey hobbled up the steps of the church and nimbly trotted up the aisle, faced round, and took up a position immediately under the pulpit. Before a couple of florid farmers could be aroused from their accustomed Sunday aftaroused from their accustomed Sunday atternoon nap to drag forth the invader, another donkey, dragging a cart, lumbered up the steps to join his relative. When he had succeeded in forcing his way through the porch till the shafts and body of the cart were wedged between the pillars, finding his future passage barred, he expressed his his future passage barred, he expressed his surprise and annoyance by discharging that peculiar, reduplicated and resonant sound duced to poverty, descend into debt, and people will wonder why your husband ever married such a sour-faced wife. But these half-fellows-well-met young men generally do marry sweet-faced wives. Some one must bear the burden of support, some one must plan the ways and means and feel anxious and careworn at times, and where chorused by the congregation of asses out-

"I left home rather hurriedly one morn-"I left home rather hurriedly one morning, and just before leaving I had seized from the pocket-handkerchief box a folded square of linen, of the usual shape, size and terture, and had transferred it to my cassock pocket. In the earlier part of my discourse, becoming conscious of an impending sneeze, and being unwilling to interrupt the even tenor of my oratory, I fished out my hand-kerchief with one hand, and then, in the little elegant way that most people have, with both hands gave it a shake to release it from its folds. Having stayed off the sneeze by its application, I laid it on the edge of the pulpit, when the passing of an indefinable shade of expression across the upturned faces of my nearest hearers caused me to dart a glance toward my handkerchief, imagining that it might be slipping over the edge. My eye caught sight of a hole at one side of it which had apparently been imperfectly repaired with sight of a hole at one side of it which had apparently been imperfectly repaired with some lace, and I gave the thing another shake to conceal the defect. To my dismay and confusion two tiny sleeves and a frilled neck appeared on the confines of my 'hand-kerchiet,' and a cold thrill passed over me when I recognized the little object as being a stray part of the attire of my infant daughter.

"It was customary, some years ago—in certain districts the practice still lingers—for the minister, in giving out the hymn to read the first verse. I remember once hearing a young curste give out, in a very lachrymose and sentimental tone, the verse of a well-known hymn which ends with the lachrymose and sentimental tone, the verse of a well-known hymn which ends with the words: 'And wipe my weeping eyes.' The pathos was sadly spoiled, and the gravity of his hearers tested by his rendering it: 'And weep my wiping eyes.' He was immediately conscious of his mistake, and his confusion only made matters worse. Experience has no doubt since taught him that it is wiser, under such circumstances, to go boldly forward, trusting to successive thoughts to obliterate a little error, rather than to call attention to it by endeavoring to rectify his mistake at the time."

An Expensive Luxury.

In Three Days. Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism, but it can be done, if the prope restment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert of New Brunswick, Ills.: "I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It cured me in three days. I am all right today; and I would urge on everyone who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once." An Expression of Delight. "About a week ago," says a Los Angeles, Cal., druggist, "a Chinaman came in with a lame shoulder. I sold him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pair him a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and guaranteed that it would cure him. He came in again last night, and as soon as he got inside the door began to swing his arms over his head like an Indian club swinger.
